April saw the worst deterioration in Australian manufacturing conditions in four years of data collection, with output and new orders falling at new record rates as stricter COVID-19 measures weighed on the economy. The downturn in sales led firms to cut back on both purchasing activity and inventories. Hiring was also reduced sharply while business sentiment dropped to a record low. Meanwhile supply chains came under greater pressure, contributing to a sharp rise in input costs.

The headline index from the survey, the seasonally adjusted Commonwealth Bank Manufacturing Purchasing Managers’ Index™ (PMI®) fell to 44.1 in April, down from 49.7 in March. The latest reading was the lowest on record. The headline PMI is calculated from a weighted average of output, new orders, employment, input inventories and delivery times.

Lower sales and factory closures contributed to the further development of spare capacity, as reflected by a record fall in manufacturing backlogs. This in turn dampened hiring. Job shedding accelerated to the quickest pace ever recorded, with forced layoffs and a freeze on staff replacement often mentioned as reasons. Decreased production requirements led firms to cut back their purchasing activity, which fell at the quickest rate on record. Consequently, input inventories were depleted further and at a record pace. Business confidence meanwhile sank to the lowest since the survey began in May 2016.

Supply shortages, a weaker currency and higher transport fees lifted input price inflation to the fastest since June 2018. However, weak demand saw firms unable to pass on fully the increase in cost to customers, with output charge inflation instead easing to a seven-month low.
